The pedlar, who, by this time, began himself to mistrust the reasonableness of his errand, was loth to expose what might be his own folly: but, at last, on being very much pressed, Well, quoth he, an I must tell you, a vision bade me come to London Bridge, for that there I should find a treasure: but treasure have I found none, and, unless I am the more fortunate, back shall I go as poor as I came. Never trust again to visions, quoth the othor: if I had been fool enough to be taken in by them, I might have boon sent, ere now, on as wild-goose a chase as you...
